U. S. Spy Network Still Ranks Below Russian Machine

WASHINGTON— (UP)—The Central Intelligence Agency—the super-secret spy organization of the U. S. Government—is getting better all the time. But it still is a long way from equalling the costly Communist espionage machine.

No public statement has been specific about the activities of the spy organization. It operates all over the world, but not even Congress knows such simple details as how many employees it has or how much it spends each year.

Most of the agency's work would seem pretty dull alongside the TV-radio type espionage thriller.

A great bulk of the cloak-and-dagger outfit's daily chore is research. It includes close scrutiny of technical journals, newspapers, radio reports, economic data and diplomatic documents.

That's the opinion of CIA head Allen W. Dulles; a Hoover Commission task force headed by Gen. Mark W. Clark, and Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, who made a study of the agency for President Eisenhower.
